

SYSTEMS AND METHODS FOR DEVELOPING AND DISTRIBUTING SOFTWARE COMPONENTS

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method for distributing software components to computer stations that analyze products is described. The method includes obtaining a software component including information used by a computer station which communicates with a test station to analyze a product, and distributing the software component to the computer station automatically based on at least one of an identification of the test station and an identification of the product.